Benjamin Letzler is University Assistant (prae doc) in the Department of European, International and Comparative Law, Section for International Law and International Relations at the University of Vienna. He studied history and mathematics at Columbia University (summa cum laude), was a DAAD scholarship holder at the Freie Universität Berlin and received his JD from Harvard Law School in 2007.

Prior to his current role, he practiced financial services law at law firms and in the public sector in Boston, Munich, London and Frankfurt. His past pro bono engagement includes work for the New York City Bankruptcy Assistance Project (NYC BAP).