

Mag. Koloman Roiger-Simek, BA BA has worked as a researcher and lecturer at the University of Vienna's Department for International Law and International Relations since March 2020.

He studied Law, International Development and European Ethnology at the University of Vienna and spent a semester at the Eötvös-Loránd-University in Budapest and at the University of Sydney. He also completed the specialisation in the elective field of "European Union Law".

Before commencing his current employment, he worked at the same institute as a research assistant in the field of space law, and worked as an assistant at a lawyer's office.

His main research focus is on the international protection of human right and international procedural law, in which he is also writing his doctoral thesis.